THE SCHOOL OF METHODS OF METHODS

Brilliant Opening of the Sixteenth Annual Session.

DR. ALDERMAN SPEAKS

Showed an Intimate Knowledge of the Work and Warm Sympathy With the Teachers.

(Special to The Times-Dispatch.)
CIVIL RIGHTS, Va., June 27.—Although he was the last to speak upon the inauguration to-night of the sixteenth annual session of the Summer School of Methods at the University of Virginia, Dr. Edwin A. Alderman's speech was easily the feature of an occasion signified by the efforts of men confessedly of great gifts. At the very outset he put himself in accord with the hundreds of teachers to whom he was speaking by showing an intimate knowledge of their work and of warm sympathy in their efforts. His first vote, he said, had been cast to increase taxes for public school purposes; the first honest dollar he ever earned was paid him for teaching a public school, and the first speech of a long series of such efforts was made for the public schools.

THE INTELLECTUAL ARENA.
The school house, he said, has now become the focus and center of the best thought and intellectual life of the country. In the old world, the traveler must see that the great cathedral, with its towers, arches, and the impulses and the deeds of the people of long ago clustered. In this country in former times, the courthouse was the intellectual arena, but that time has passed and today the schoolhouse is with us and the school teacher abroad. He described the position held by the pedagogues in the early days of our republic and said that Washington would never have thought of ending a school-master to the court of St. James, but to-day the school-master has become a statesman. He referred pointedly to the inadequate pay of our teachers and to the great need for better school houses in many sections, and said the remedy for it all was taxation.

MISSION OF DELICACY.
Although, upon introducing him, Mr. Glass had referred to Dr. Alderman as the newly elected president of the University of Virginia, Dr. Alderman did not intimate what his decision would be as to acceptance, but confined himself to saying that, of course, it was known that he had come to Virginia on a mission of great delicacy.

The reception that was given his remarks was extremely cordial, and undoubtedly the audience, if called upon to vote, would have given unanimous approval of the board's selection of the first president of this institution. The exercises were opened by Mr. John R. Patton, city superintendent of schools. Prayer was offered by the Rev. William H. Edwards, of the Methodist Church. Addresses of welcome were made by Mayor J. Samuel McCue, Professor William H. Thornton and Professor Francis T. Smith. These were responded to by Professor Aggar, the senior member of the School of Methods faculty; Edward Howard Griggs, of the department of methods; Thomas Walker Page, of the University of Texas, a brother of Dr. James Morris Page, chairman of the faculty of the University of Virginia, and Dr. Currier, of the chair of English, Washington and Lee University.

Mrs. Jessie L. Southwick, of the Emerson School ofatory, Boston, gave one of her recitations.

String and vocal music also added to the enjoyment of the evening.

ALDERMAN APPLAUDED.
When Mr. E. C. Glass, conductor of the school, in presenting Dr. Alderman, stated that a new and great educational era is about to dawn in Virginia, and that the man and the hour have at last met, the audience broke forth in prolonged applause, and it was some time before Mr. Glass could proceed.

There was an outburst of enthusiasm when Dr. Alderman advanced briskly to the speaker's stand and began his address.

Every train into the city to-day has brought to the School of Methods additional members. While there are as yet less than one hundred registered, it is certain that 700 teachers are enrolled, and that the total enrollment before the close of the session will reach 900.

The new institution, established through the influence of Mr. Tilly, and named in honor of Bishop Granbery, is 30 miles distant from Rio de Janeiro, and is located in a strong Catholic community.

The ceremonies attending the opening of the college were conducted by Rev. S. R. Gammon, formerly of Virginia.

DISTRICT CONFERENCE

Bishop John C. Granbery Will Preside at Norfolk.

A YACHTING CRUISE

Norfolk Will Compete With Baltimore for Southern Trade by Paying Railroad Fare.

(Special to The Times-Dispatch.)
NORFOLK, VA., June 27.—Delegates to the Norfolk District Conference of the M. E. Church, South, will convene at Cumberland Street Methodist Church tomorrow morning.

Bishop John C. Granbery, formerly of Norfolk, will preside over the conference and will deliver a sermon Wednesday evening. The district conference is composed of itinerant and local preachers and three laymen from each pastoral charge in the district, which consists of Norfolk, Princess Anne county, a part of Norfolk county and a small strip of Nansemond and Isle of Wight counties. The delegates number fifty-five in all, but it is improbable that more than sixty-five will attend. Morning and afternoon sessions will be held to-morrow and Wednesday, and probably on Thursday if the business of the body cannot be disposed of in two days.

YACHTING CRUISE.

The Hampton Roads Yacht Club returned yesterday afternoon from its first cruise, having during the day thoroughly delighted it to prove to be that arrangements were at once made for a second cruise, on which it will start July 20th, going to Wharton's Grove, on the Rappahannock. Six yachts left Willoughby Beach Saturday afternoon at 4 o'clock for Jamestown Island, arriving at their destination at 9 o'clock, thus making the trip in five hours. When it is known that the steamer sailing the James River usually take four hours to make Jamestown from Norfolk, some idea may be had of the excellent time made by the yachts.

COMPETE FOR TRADE.

To compete with Baltimore merchants, the business men of Norfolk will offer to the merchants of North Carolina and South Carolina inducements that are calculated to make the Southern buyers northbound stop here to make purchases. On purchases amounting to $1,000 Baltimore merchants will rebate one-half fare to buyers coming from as far south as Florida.

The Chamber of Commerce will go the Baltimore business men one better. To merchants in North Carolina and South Carolina who make purchases here as high as $1,000 the entire round trip fare will be rebated. When purchases amounting to $500 half-fare will be allowed.
